

organisms made of cells with a nucleus, such as plants, animals, fungi and protoctists (pro-TOCK-tists).

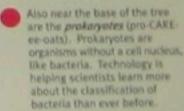

dinosaurs than to grasshoppers.

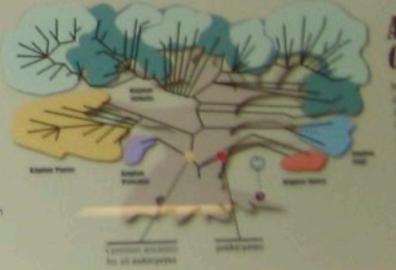

The point where one branch connects with another represents an evolutionary change. Organisms above the connecting point share common features or characteristics that set them apart from organisms below the connecting poin

Heast closely

related to birds

where they fit in (viruses are not made of cells and arc wit considered living organisms).

Viruses are not connected to the tree, since no one is certain